Whether you're looking for something campy or downright scary, these reviews and roundups will help you find the perfect horror movie. Get ready to be scared of zombie movies, ghosts, serial killers and more. By Esther ZuckermanPublikalem 21.03.2019 at 13:20 PmLupita Nyong'o | Claudette Barius/Universal PicturesLupita Nyong'o | Claudette Barius / Universal PicturesZ The first frames of us, writer and director Jordan Peele gives us a master class in anticipation. A young girl stares at a TV that shows an ad at the 1986 charity event Hands Across America, her bounced face superimposed on the screen. The TV is framed by VHS tapes from 80s genre films such as C.H.U.D., The Goonies and The Man With Two Brains, and the artifacts serve her reflective quiet look even more arresting. But Peele not only encourages you to watch closely and look for symbols in pop culture ephemerals. It reverses the warm and watery nostalgia of the 80s that viewers have become accustomed to today. A shot is his mission. The director's follow-up debut, Get Out from 2017, hits theaters this weekend with almost impossible expectations. Get Out is not only a box office hit and Oscar winner, but also a film that said something about the times we live in. The good news is that the United States is approaching the impact of these highs. His streak of comments is cheeky, though, and his energy is more akin to a night out at a carnival full of roller coaster rides and funhouse mirrors than a hyper-tense dinner. Viewers who need explanations for each story may be a little disappointed. But it's a great time for us, and Peele's ability to create memorable images is absolutely invigorating. No one today works better at capturing terror in the eyes of man than he is. Claudette Barius/Universal PicturesUS continues the opening sequence with flashbacks featuring that little girl (Madison Curry) on the Santa Cruz boardwalk with her parents arguing. When her father (Yahya Abdul-Mateen II) plays Whac-a-Mole, she wanders the sand, mysteriously attracted to an attraction called Shaman's Vision Quest, which promises to find you. It turns out it's literal. In the mirror room, she comes face to face with her own doppelgänger. The narrative then jumps forward to the present, where this child is now an adult Adelaide Wilson (Lupita Nyong'o) on vacation with children Zora and Jason (Shahadi Wright Joseph and Evan Alex) and her husband Gabe (Winston Duke). They stay in their mother Adelaide's old waterfront home, near this fateful pedestrian street that Adelaide is reluctant to visit. Gabe, fascinated by his new boat, seems unaware of his wife's anxiety. Zora is buried on her phone. And Jason, well, Jason is a little off, opting to wear a Chewbacca mask almost all the time. The foursome ends up on the beach, hanging with a hideous couple (played by Tim Heidecker and Moss) that Gabe is desperate to impress. Jason wanders to use the bathroom and encounters a lonely figure, outstretched hands, hands dripping with blood. Adelaide is apoplectic that her son briefly went missing. But later that night the horrors begin. You've seen the trailer, so you know: The family, tied with their hands, stands menacingly in the Wilson driveway. Soon they break into the house, and when their faces are illuminated by the light of fire, we see that they are mirror images of the Wilsons, dressed in red overalls, each of which is somehow contorted. Claudette Barius / Universal PicturesZ there, the film unfolds with a series of set tracks that find the Wilsons struggling and running away from their extremely famous enemies. It's a relentless chase that only gets more gruesome as it goes, but Peele blessed refuses to abandon the medium that made him a star with Key and Peele. Almost every scene is persuaded with moments that break down terror with humor. These breaks rip through a bloodbath in the form of musical signals (Good Vibrations and Fuck tha Police make surprising bedfellows), and warm interactions between the Wilsons, in particular Gabe, Zora and Jason. Duke, who stole the scene in the Black Panther, continues to do so here, fully embracing Gabe's dad's dorky vibrations. By the power of the plot, Nyong'o exists somewhat in isolation from this camaraderie, but what she does in her dual roles is not unusual, and the extent to which she layers these portraits is not entirely clear until the final moments of the film. Her tense, cracking doppelgänger voice will be imitated, but will never be recreated. It is perfectly calibrated, so every time it may seem ridiculous, the voice effectively begins to haunt. As Adelaide, Nyong'o exudes tormented cruelty by deftly wielding an iron of fire. Still, she never fully shows her hand, leaving us to wonder how deeply her trauma goes. Peele fully reveals his intricate mythology in the third act, and while it's easy to invent holes in some of the logistics of what he describes, his points couldn't be clearer. Both in reference and in format, many of us feel like excavations, and perhaps even exorcism, of peelee's childhood influences, all in order to make a great metaphor about America's heartlessness and its class system. Our current pop culture landscape, from Stranger Things to Bumblebee, has come a long way to portray the 1980s as a more innocent time. The United States emphasizes the insidiousness of the Reagan era, even recognizing that yes, the movies were pretty great. Like any abandoned rec room filled with kitsch from the past, Us is a little messy in places, but you'll definitely have time to blast spending time in its crazy, delirious world, even as you stop to consider how evil really is. It's easy to make a bad movie, but you need a fascinating mix of talentless-ness, judgmental deprivation, ignorance of the technical and creative aspects of filming, all around bad taste and the inability to recognize any of these shortcomings to make the film so bad that it comes full circle and becomes enjoyable. Consider this Horror Movie Hall of Shame. What is it? The Z-class sequel to the 1985 B-movie Biohazard about an evil corporation that creates an indestructible creature that obviously escapes and walks around killing people, yadda yadda yadda. What's so incredibly wrong about it? This is no stranger; is a mutant. The creature is one drop away from the Power Rangers character. Tossing floppy disks into someone's face is as effective as hitting them with a brick. A collision of 10 mph cars causes vehicles to become engulfed in flames. Our hero's speech: I like football and now I'm going to release that quarterback. High/Lowlight: A woman inexplicably sculpts ceramics while having sex. Example dialogue: Are you crazy? Don't die there! What is it? A self-proclaimed romantic tribute thriller to Alfred Hitchcock's The Birds. What's so incredibly wrong about it? Fascinating scenes of our hero driving to work and negotiating the price of a solar panel on its roof. Birds that make the sound of an aircraft bombing dive and then explode into contact. A scene that contains 75 seconds of applause (with a looped sound). Eagles that can float without moving their wings. Whole scenes without dialogue and meaningful action. A star that behaves as if it has emotional paralysis. High/Lowlight: Fight birds with coat hangers. Example dialogue: Hey, there are dead people on the side of the road. Let's see if there are any survivors. What is it? A no-budget African-American fare about virgin, the church will be a woman who buys a cursed ventriloquist mannequin who wants to have sex with her. What's so incredibly wrong about it? Did I mention that the doll wants to have sex with her? Did I mention that the doll had sex with her? And she likes it? It is filmed in the early 80's camera. Super Mario Bros.-esque Casio keyboard score. 7-minute sequence of opening credits. The child was used as the double body in a film about the rape of dolls. High/Lowlight: Close-ups of the doll's fully functional tongue, covered in what looks like vanilla ice cream from a soft portion. Example dialogue: Now that you have felt the memory of my breath, you can now try the sweetness of my tongue! What is it? An Italian fear movie that piranha on a ship with amphibian fish that can breathe air and fly. What's so incredibly wrong about it? Funny dubbed voices. Moronian characters who speak in the style of it must be a refrigerator and who think it's a good idea to try the mysterious white powder that they find in the lab. The ship's self-destruction alarm says: Is anyone listening? I still hear Evacuation! Evacuation! Stop screwing in High/Lowlight: Woman gives birth to thousands of fish eggs (granted, she had sex with mutant fish). Example dialogue: Professor, how long have you been f***ing fish? (Answer: They were old enough!) © Miracle Pictures What is it? Unfortunately, it's not Die Hard with vampires. Rather, the American travels to the Czech Republic and defends the villagers from Dracula. What's so incredibly wrong about it? Czech locals have American accents. No one suspects that a man walking with blood-resurrected mouths and ashens face is a vampire. Our heroes storm Dracula Castle four times and flee each time. The sensual love scene suddenly cuts to the sounds of bed springs swinging to the Nutcracker. Trepak. Trepak (Russian dance). Dracula visits the dentist. High/Lowlight: Dracula flies through the air while still in the coffin, to the tune of Ride of the Valkyries. Example dialogue: I am American and we are tough! © Urban Works What is it? The trial of rapper Master P in a horror film, starring his son Romeo, about a murder victim who returns to revenge. What's so incredibly wrong about it? The 40-year-old Master P plays a student. Add-ons look straight into the camera more than once. Entire scenes of dialogue are drowned out by general hip-hop music. That's 44 minutes, including credits. There is seven minutes of footage of Master P walking through some shoddy theme park haunted by home attraction. One victim dies from a shower closure. High/Lowlight: Sean conjures up Michael Jackson... three years before his death. (Cue paedophile jokes.) Example dialogue: It looks like it's straight out of the hood, or something like that. © Dark Sky What is it? Cold War-era fare about an American android astronaut (Frank) battling Martians wants to breed with Earth's women. What's so incredibly wrong about it? Spacemonster is one word. Dandy the Martian villain looks like a discarded caricature of Mike Myers. Cosmic Monster is a guy in a gorilla suit with a rubber monster mask. Martians have a machine that seems to say whether women are virgins or not. Scenes switch randomly between day and night. Stock material! High/Lowlight: In the midst of searching for Frank and stopping the Martian invasion, our heroes go on a tour of Vespa. Example dialogue: This is a clear case of failure. What is it? Walker, Texas Ranger-era Chuck Norris plays a cop battling an ancient demon with only his fists, legs, and beard. What's so incredibly wrong about it? Norris's character is called Frank Shatter. Shatter seems to be buying clothes for sale at Don Johnson's yard. The Hollywood-standard police chief yells about Shatter being a loose cannon. Hollywood-standard black comic helper relief. Demonic bad guy has kermit frog eyes. High/Lowlight: Smash shoots with a gun recklessly in the air and then fights the offender who is already in custody because he can. Example dialogue: Eat it! What is it? Fatal sequel to beloved werewolf movie The In which a werewolf hunter (a very embarrassed Christopher Lee) travels to Europe to track down the queen of werewolves. What's so incredibly wrong about it? If you remove a silver ball from a werewolf during an autopsy, the werewolf will come back to life. Christopher Lee blends into a punk nightclub wearing sunglasses and jeans. Werewolves do little more than hissute threes. Mace-wielding dwarves! The werewolf queen shoots lightning from her fingers. Werewolf's makeup includes shag carpets and plastic fangs. High/Lowlight: Hero Ben throws a dwarf through the window. Example dialogue: He plans to destroy me, but I will destroy him! What is it? A cheap feature about a holiday family that encounters a brutal and annoying cult. What's so incredibly wrong about it? Endless scenes driving past the scenery. Twitichy, torgo's limping caretaker speaks like Twiki from Buck Rogers trapped in one of those old belt vibrating exercise machines. Scenes dissolve in the same scene. Torgo is crushed to death. Clapperboard is visible in one scene. High/Lowlight: Not one but two all women nightgown-clad, hair-pulling, rolling in dirt bangs. Sample dialogue: No way out. It will be dark soon. There is no way out. What is it? SyFy sequel Mega Shark vs. Giant Octopus, about a genetically altered piranha that-shocker- get out of control. (Mega Shark may have gotten more press, but for my money, Mega Piranha has more bad movie entertainment value.) What's so incredibly wrong about it? The 80s singer stars Tiffany as a professor of genetics. Barry Greg Brady Williams plays the Secretary of State. Stiff CGI critters that move tails, the only thing stiffer is Tiffany's acting. Fish that come ashore to kill people... then proceed to death. He is an abs hero of steel, which is a combination of Jean-Claude Van Damme and a telephone pole. High/Lowlight: The scene of digging bikes. Example dialogue: It just became real! What is it? Long regarded by many as the de facto worst film ever made, this notorious effort by cult director Ed Wood finds aliens trying to take over the Earth by animating dead bodies — at least three of them. What's so incredibly wrong about it? A pompous narrative that needs to explain what happens in each scene. Flying saucers hang on the strings. UFOs are described as cigar-shaped when saucers are clearly made. Bela Lugosi died during production, and his stand-in tries to mask his identity by holding Dracula's cape in front of his face. High/Lowlight: Foppish alien leader throwing hiss fits. Your stupid minds! Stupid! Silly! Example dialogue: Future events like these will affect you in the future. What is it? Homerootic horror icon David DeCoteau tells us the story of an undead boyar looking for a new singer. What's so incredibly wrong about it? People are trying to get on the lip sync singer in auditions. Dated in '04) boy band performances cut into scenes that deal with them exercise. Poorly veiled homoeroticism. Ryan Star's mumble-mouthed performance is even worse than her singing. Von Dutch product placement! They are the largest group in the world, but they only have one song that ad nauseum repeats. High/Lowlight: A 2-minute, 25-second scene of band members walking together without explanation or action. Example dialogue: For someone in the music industry, you're pretty easy to cheat. What is it? Blame Canada for this entry from rocker Jon Miki Thor about the rehearsal team at home, which is a portal to hell. What's so incredibly wrong about it? What better way to start a movie than with a four-minute mounting ride? One character is called Roger Ebut. Not-so-subtle pro-Canada bias: Toronto is where it happens, man; music, film industry, art! Satan's ultimate weapon: Play-Doh Starfish. High/Lowlight: Our hero strips to his studded leather codpiece to fight Satan. Example dialogue: There is the supreme law of the creator that keeps you in your dark place, and yet you and your brethren continue to try to come into this world and try to steal a place in the world of the living. When will you ever learn? What is it? Robocop meets Maniac Cop, who meets Frankenstein, as an experimental android called R.O.T.O.R. goes on a killing spree. What's so incredibly wrong about it? Our hero is a wannabe Clint Eastwood type named Aaron Coldryon (Cold Iron).R.O.T.O.R. looks like Tron Guy.Punches that miss by two feet. Random kung fu! 80s style: Mullet! Shoulder pads! Strict racial stereotypes! Lame tries comedy, courtesy of the whiny police robot that poor Johnny 5 of Short Circuit.R.O.T.O.R.'s weakness: car horns? High/Lowlight: R.O.T.O.R. engages in a melee with a skunk-haired she-man muscle that appears in the last 15 minutes. Example dialogue: To combat pure will, you will have to use pure illogical. What is it? Before any mega sharks hit SyFy, there was Megalodon, a sequel about a prehistoric shark that makes other Shark Attack movies look like jaws. What's so incredibly wrong about it? Shark roar. Many actors seem to learn English on the fly. Funny special effects, which are the cinematic equivalent of cutting and pasting. Accidental inappropriate laughter during dialogue. Papier-mâché shark fin. A giant shark attacks your yacht, so you decide to jump into the water? Probably one of the worst lines I've ever spoken in a movie (see below). High/Lowlight: Smogastorb shark. Example dialogue: What do you say, I'll take you home and take your p****? What is it? This unrelated Italian production sequel to the 1986 film Troll, in which a holiday family falls prey to creatures that want to turn them into vegetables and eat them, received such a cult following that it has its own documentary, titled Best Worst Movie. Which is so incredibly bad about There are no trolls; goblins only. Vegetarian cannibals? Continuity problems (dad's shirt is open, open, then open) Halloween store goblin masks don't have moving lips, so how can they eat something? None of the family members are wary of people trying to force them to feed their green goo. Oh my gaaaaaaaawwwwwwwwwddddd!!!! High/Lowlight: Goblins run away with a baloney sandwich. Example dialogue: You can't get caught up in hospitality! What is it? An inadvertently (?) campy remake of the famous 1973 British thriller about a policeman searching for a missing girl in an isolated pagan community. What's so incredibly wrong about it? Nicolas Cage's manic performance. Our hero threatens young children, punches two women in the face and karate kicks Leelee Sobieski next week. Additionally, he finds a rotten human body with his mouth sewn and eyes and arm eaten by animals and proceeds to shake it to see if he is still alive. High/Lowlight: BEAR. Suit. Example dialogue: Killing me won't bring back your damn honey!
